Buried Them Deep.

The Smithsonian Institute has re ceived from Barton County, Ga., a natural curiosity that is arousing much interest. A company which is getting out limestone from a solid ledge found, 100 feet below the surface of the ledge, an immense deposit of human and animal bones carelessly heaped together and imbedded in the solid rock. The bones are intact, but break when the effort is made to free them from the stone. A mass of this conglomerate of stone and bones weighing 5,000 pounds has been received here, and the Smithsonian authorities will send an expert down to examine the deposit, which is represented to weigh many tons. No explanation is offered for the bones being there, save that a cave existed there inhabited by antediluvians and it afterwards slowly filled with a limestone deposit which cannot now be distinguished from the original Close connections made at Ashland with stages of the California & Oregon Stage Co.
